Under Programs and Services, select Food and Nutrition
The Cherry Creek School District’s Food and Nutrition Department is always ready for a review. From department directors to chefs working in kitchens across the district’s 108 square miles, those in charge of connecting more than 55,000 students with healthy, nutritious and tasty food are always striving for excellence. Whether it’s creating menus that include a variety of grain-rich meals and fresh fruits and vegetables or it’s rising before dawn to make sure all of the baked goods are ready for the breakfast run, Food and Nutrition professionals in CCSD set the bar high.

The department’s dedication to quality hasn’t gone unnoticed by the Colorado Department of Education. The CCSD Food and Nutrition Department recently underwent an administrative review by CDE’s Office of School Nutrition yielded high praise and impressive results. Indeed, the state’s administrative review, which is conducted every three years, encompassed visits to eight schools across the district and resulted in commendations regarding everything from menu design to food procurement.

That’s no small feat for a department that includes more than 60 full-service kitchens and that last year served about 3.2 million lunches and about 1 million breakfasts. According to Director of Food and Nutrition Services Kim Kilgore, the positive feedback from the CDE reflects a broader philosophy in every kitchen and every cafeteria across the district. “This kind of quality didn’t just happen over the past two months, as we were preparing for the review. These are measures we take every day at every school across the district,” Kilgore said. The department’s dedication reflects the Operational Excellence component of Cherry Creek Future Forward, the district’s roadmap for maintaining excellence well into the future. “This is our job. All of us work to instill the importance of making a difference every single day. It’s the culmination of always keeping the student in mind.”

That dedication was clear to the reviewers who visited cafeterias at Arrowhead Elementary, Canyon Creek Elementary, Challenge School, Cottonwood Creek Elementary, Highline Community Elementary, Laredo Middle, Overland High and Summit Elementary. At every school, reviewers praised kitchen managers and staff alike. They offered no suggestions for improvements in the operations at any of the schools, and they were impressed by signage, menu diversity and customer service.

Brandon Durio, the district’s Executive Chef, said the glowing reviews are a result of a shared commitment from the very top levels of the operation. Even as district chefs and bakers work to adhere to nutrition standards, they also work to offer students a variety of appealing flavor profiles and dishes. For the CCSD FNS Department, the everyday work of feeding thousands of students involves plenty of craft and artistry. “We are always focused on our customer service, and we’re always ready for a review,” Durio said. “We are so happy to welcome every single student to eat in one of our cafeterias. Our staff makes us proud, and they do so on a daily basis.”
